Watson & Chapman scored a fine victory in the supreme court by the reversal of the decision of the circuit court in the case of Marshall Thomas vs. the Ana Arbor Ry. Co. The case was brought to recover damages for an injury received by the breaking of the guy ropes used to lower the girder of a bridge into position. The lower court held that Mr. Thomas and Thos. Turnbull, the superintendent, were fellow servants and that both were equally responsible. The supreme court holds to the contrary and thus ordered a new trial. The case has been closely contested throughout, the attorney of the railroad company feeling certain that it would win in the higher court. The points raised by Watson & Chapman were all sustained, making the opinion doubly pleasing.
